Household Battery Recycling

The City of Los Angeles Department of Public Works (DPW) has partnered with Los Angeles-area Jiffy Lube franchisees to add battery recycling collection containers at 28 stores, to expand the drop-off points available to Angelenos.

More than 900,000 household batteries are improperly and illegally disposed of each year in Los Angeles, leaking chemicals that contaminate our air, water and even our food. By adding these 28 locations to the City's existing S.A.F.E. Centers, battery recycling is easier and more convenient than ever.

Each participating Jiffy Lube location will display a white container in which residents can place AA, AAA, C cells, D cells and button batteries (hearing aid and watch batteries). The batteries will be picked up by the DPW and recycled.

Battery Recycling Facts:

- More than one million household batteries were sold last year in the City of Los Angeles. Only 60,000 were disposed of properly.
- AA, AAA, C cells, D cells and button batteries (e.g. hearing aid batteries) must be disposed of properly because they may contain a corrosive chemical that can cause burns as well as toxic heavy metals like cadmium.
- The metal casing on batteries takes two to five years to decompose.
- Decomposing batteries in landfills leak chemicals that can contaminate our air, water and even food.
- Disposing of household batteries and other chemicals in your trash, storm drains or sewers damages the environment, and is against the law.
